Muse Advisory announces appointment of two programme managers

19 May 2025: Muse Advisory continues to grow its Programme Management team with two experienced hires. This is to meet the increasing demand from pension schemes to help with endgame planning and implementation, alongside other complex projects requiring specialist project management expertise.

Adam Barker, who previously worked for Mercer and Aptia, brings over 30 years' experience in leading large, complex change projects that have mainly focused on pensions. Olivia Devereese joined Muse from Fidelity International and has over 10 years of project experience, managing regulatory pensions projects and value-add proposition projects that have been complex in scale.

Jo Fellowes, Director, comments, 'Adam and Olivia have a real depth of expertise in managing complex change projects within the pension sector. They bring significant programme management experience, working on large-scale projects with multiple workstreams. Adam and Olivia have great complementary skills and bring with them a client-first ethos, which is what Muse is so well-known for. We are delighted to have them on board.'
